INSTRUCTIONS TO APPLY FOR A DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES AGENCY CERTIFICATE

What is a Developmental Disabilities Agency (DDA) and DDA services?

A DDA is an agency that is a type of developmental disabilities facility that is non-residential and provides services on an outpatient basis. A DDA is certified by the department to provide DDA services to people with developmental disabilities that are rehabilitative and habilitative in nature. It is a business entity, open for business to the general public; and primarily organized and operated to provide DDA services and the corresponding assessments to adults and children with developmental disabilities. DDA services include assessment, diagnostic, and treatment services and may be community-based, home-based, or center-based in accordance with the requirements in IDAPA 16.03.21 and IDAPA 16.03.10.

Each DDA providing services to children is required to provide habilitative support services and will be certified as a support services agency. An agency certified as a support services agency may also opt to provide respite and family education services.

A DDA providing services to children also has the choice to be certified as an intervention and support services agency. If a DDA is certified as an intervention and support services agency, the agency is required to provide habilitative supports, habilitative intervention, and family training. Agencies certified as intervention and support services may also opt to provide the following optional services: respite, family education, interdisciplinary training, therapeutic consultation, and crisis intervention.

How do I apply?

DDAs who wish to seek reimbursement from Medicaid for their services must apply for a Medicaid Provider Agreement and comply with the standards of that agreement. Your Medicaid Provider Enrollment application must be completed online at www.idmedicaid.com.

NOTE: Agencies that want to provide Adult Day Care in addition to DDA services must also complete the Medicaid Provider Agreement for Adult Day Care. The Supplemental Agreement section states compliance standards that must also be followed.

Health and Welfare Rules

Access Health and Welfare Rules by going to www.adm.idaho.gov . Choose the top tab that says “Administrative Rules”. There are two links on that site that are important now and in the future. They are the “Idaho Administrative Code” link and the “Idaho Administrative Bulletin” link

- The Bulletin is where proposed and temporary rules are published.
- By choosing the link to the “Idaho Administrative Code”, there are links to state agency rules.
- Select “Health and Welfare” and there are links to different sets of rules. Oftentimes one set of rules will be cross-referenced in another set. You will need to comply with any cross-referenced rules as applicable.
